

The Photography of Robert Spears

Robert Spears, a Montana born and raised, long time Midland resident, is an accomplished retired Communications professional and serious amateur photographer passionate about capturing images that reveal what the eye cannot see, nor the mind comprehend, unless time is stopped and the image reproduced for further observation. In recent years Spears has been fortunate to travel extensively and participate in some Creative Composition classes with renowned Seattle based photographer Art Wolfe. Some of the principles and techniques learned through these experiences has helped the photographer create some spectacular panoramic images, landscapes, sunsets, and wildlife photos from numerous parts of the country. Many of these images have been reproduced as prints or stretched canvases available in a variety of finished forms suitable for hanging. A few are reproduced below:
