Beauty in the world – from the smallest rosebud to a magnificent sunset – is where her inspiration is found.

She loves to travel, and her photographs become reference material for her paintings – from a castle along the Danube to a frozen creek along side a Michigan country road. To capture the beauty of nature, acrylic paint is her medium of choice.

Her goal is to render a painting that recreates the visual and emotional experience she felt while visiting the site, and to instill that same feeling in the viewer.
